

Marsden AES – Apprentice Job Description

Marsden AES are an experienced environmental contractor based in Hellifield and operating in the North of England. The team is lead by Steve Marsden who has 18 years of experience working in the industry and is supported by experienced project and site managers.

Brief description

This apprenticeship vacancy offers an exciting opportunity to become part of a small team based near Hellifield. The role provides hands-on experience in practical conservation, land management, machinery operation, and health and safety procedures while developing the skills needed for a career in the environmental sector.

Key Responsibilities

- Support the delivery of environmental and agricultural projects across a range of habitats and landscapes.
- Assist experienced operatives with peatland restoration activities.
- Contribute to wetland and river improvement works.
- Support habitat creation and enhancement projects.
- Undertake vegetation management tasks.
- Assist with the installation and maintenance of fencing.
- Help develop and maintain access infrastructure.
- Participate in a variety of countryside management activities.
- Gain practical experience in conservation and land management techniques.

The ideal candidate should be hard working and willing to work as part of a team alongside having enthusiasm towards our natural environment.

For more information please visit the website at www.marsdenaes.co.uk