

Partnerships for Nature, Climate and Communities

For over 30 years, Yorkshire Dales Millennium Trust (YDMT) has been helping responsible businesses take action on climate change, biodiversity loss & social inequality - turning funding into measurable environmental and social impact, right here in Yorkshire.

As demand for our work continues to grow, we need additional partners who want to play a pivotal role in a brighter and greener future.

Why YDMT?

YDMT has delivered £37m+ of projects, planting 1.7 million trees, restoring 850 hectares of rare species rich meadow, and enabling 10,000+, often vulnerable people, to connect with and take action for nature. We are delivery focused, experienced, and trusted by a wide range of partners to turn funding into positive outcomes on the ground.

Our partnerships aim to maximise impact, learning and long term value, enabling your organisation to:

Deliver impact

Deliver measurable social & environmental impact through high quality, award winning projects.

Strengthen ESG

and stakeholder confidence through clear, credible reporting aligned with your ESG priorities.

Engage Employees

and leaders in visible, purpose driven environmental action, through volunteering and learning.

Lead Change

Drive economic and environmental stability by supporting nature recovery on home soil.

Why we need action now

The Yorkshire Dales plays a vital role in storing carbon, is one of the last refuges for well over 100 nationally important species and gives millions the opportunity to connect with nature in its much loved landscapes. It is also under growing pressure from climate change, biodiversity loss and inequality in access to nature.

Protecting and restoring nature is not only an environmental priority - it is an economic necessity. Over half of global GDP depends on nature, and declining biodiversity directly threatens supply chains, resource security and economic resilience. Investment in nature recovery is increasingly central to managing long term risk.
